

U.S. to Seek New Indictment of Reds

Search For Trio Goes On

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (AP) —With a personal appeal from the governor to people of this hill country "to search your own premises," the search continued today for three civil rights workers who mysteriously vanished six days ago.

"Take a few hours of your own time to search for clues," Gov. Paul B. Johnson said in a broadcast from a local radio station.

Johnson came to Philadelphia late Friday as state and federal officers—joined by 100 U.S. sailors — again fought off snakes and insects while wading through swamps in their fruitless search for the trio.

Increased FBI Role
Earlier, former CIA Director Allen Dulles had recommended to President Johnson that the FBI's role against "terroristic activity" in Mississippi be expanded.

Dulles met Friday with the President to report on his two-day White House mission to Mississippi. The President and Dulles conferred by long-distance telephone with Gov. Johnson during the meeting.

Gov. Johnson, referring to the disappearance as the "mysterious missing persons case," called on all residents of Neshoba County — white, Negroes and Indians — to cooperate in the search.

"I do want to assure the people here that the sailors have come to aid us," Gov. Johnson said. "We're glad to have them. They're fellow Americans."

The sailors are from the nearby Naval Auxiliary Air Station in Meridian.

"We do not know whether these people are alive or dead," Johnson said in his 10-minute radio talk. He expressed confidence the three men—last seen Sunday night—would be found.

"I don't know how long it will take," he added. "It might not be in my lifetime."

Shortly before the governor's arrival here, the Mississippi Highway Patrol said the blue station wagon used by the trio had been burned at least 12 hours after they vanished.

The charred vehicle used by Michael Schwerner, 24, and Andy Goodman, 20, both of New York City, and James Chaney, 22, Meridian Negro, was located in a lonely area northeast of this town of 5,000 Tuesday.

A highway patrol official said the station wagon had been driven to the spot where it was burned between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday — more than 12 hours after the trio had been escorted out of town by a deputy sheriff after paying a fine for speeding.

Nikita Bound For Norway

Ends Five-Day Visit to Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Soviet Premier Khrushchev left for Norway today after winding up his five-day visit here with an endorsement of Swedish neutrality.

A 21-gun salute boomed as Khrushchev and his party boarded a naval vessel that took them to the Soviet liner Bashkiriya in Stockholm harbor.

The blue and white ship is scheduled to arrive in Oslo Monday, after a leisurely trip along Sweden's east, south and west coasts.

Khrushchev will complete his 19-day tour of Scandinavia with a five-day visit to Norway.

In farewell ceremonies at Skeppsholmen—the ships island—in the harbor, Prime Minister Tage Erlander said he had endeavored to acquaint the Soviet leader with Swedish life, democracy and industry. He stressed that he felt that the visit would serve to expand mutual contacts and ties between Sweden and the Soviet Union.

Erlander said both countries are interested in the preservation of peace and that Khrushchev's visit was "a part of efforts to preserve world peace"

New Family Boosts Salem Population

By CAROL CROFT

Sailems population increased by 12 Thursday morning when a new family moved to town, excited over the thought of making their home here.

Mr. and Mrs. William McDonnell and their 10 children — ranging in age from one to 14 years — arrived at Barnett's Motel at 2 a.m. Thursday from Hamburg, N. Y., and stayed at the motel until noon Friday when they moved into a spacious home at 2094 E. State St.

McDonnell, who will be a supervisor in the new A. and P. Co. refrigerated warehouse, has been commuting from Hamburg for six months and the family was happy to find a home here which meets their needs. They have leased the former Walter Gray residence which is now owned by City Hospital Assn.

HOW THE FAMILY was ever able to move itself such a distance with so many setbacks is something that only Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell will ever know.

The first problem to beset them occurred Sunday morning when the children were playing outside and five-year-old Patrick fell and broke his collarbone.

A major crisis arose after the family had awakened bright and

Resignation of Italy Cabinet Causes Crisis

ROME (AP) — President Antonio Segni began talks with political leaders today, seeking an end to Italy's 25th government crisis since World War II.

The crisis imperiled a solution to Italy's economic problems, including a long siege of inflation and strikes.

Premier Aldo Moro's center-left Cabinet resigned Friday night in a doctrinal split between the Roman Catholic Christian Democrats and their Socialist partners over increased aid to church schools.

Segni asked Moro to stay on while the president consults with other political figures on finding someone to form a new Cabinet. There was speculation Segni would ask Moro to try again.

The resignation caught the nation by surprise, since the additional aid sought by Moro's Christian Democrats for private schools was less than $240,000.

The Chamber of Deputies rejected the budgetary request by a vote of 228-221 Thursday night, with only Christian Democrats in favor of it. Moro's Socialist, Democratic Socialist and Republican partners abstained.

The Communists, monarchists and fascists voted against the proposal.

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton meets today with New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller to map strategy for Scranton's bid for the Republican presidential nomination.

With the Republican National Convention just two weeks away, the two GOP leaders planned to discuss itinerary and tactics with particular emphasis on the civil rights plank for the party platform.

The Scranton camp feels that the civil rights plank will be a critical test of strength between the forces backing Scranton in his 11th-hour bid for the nomination and those backing Arizona day morning on another wider in delegate support.

1961 Conviction On Same Charge Upset

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is expected to seek a new indictment soon against the U.S. Communist party, which has refused to register as an agent of the Soviet Union.

This, it was learned today, is the course most likely to be followed by the Justice Department in reaction to a court decision upsetting a 1961 conviction of the party on the same charge.

Government sources indicated the new indictment will be painstakingly timed — possibly this summer—to allow the government to avoid the pitfall which won the Communists a reversal of the 1961 conviction.

At that time, the party was convicted of failing to register with the attorney general, as required by the Internal Security Act of 1950, and sentenced to pay a $120,000 fine — $10,000 each of 11 days past the deadline in which the party failed to register, and $10,000 for failing to file a registration statement.

The U.S. Court of Appeals reversed the conviction last December. A three-judge panel decided that the party officers who should have registered had the constitutional right to protect themselves from self-incrimination. The panel held further that the burden was on the government to prove that there was someone available to voluntarily register the party—someone who would not be concerned with possible self-incrimination.

The government, demanding full-court reconsideration, said the law requires that the party be registered, not that the person who performs the registration be a member of the party.

The government made it clear that it felt the party's use of the Fifth Amendment was a sham. It said the party, through its wide open propaganda program, never has hesitated to be represented in public by its officials, who clearly label themselves members of the party and disregard the possibility of self-incrimination.

Nevertheless, the court refused to reconsider the decision. The Supreme Court, when the department took its case there, also declined to review it.

The loss was a bitter pill. It had taken more than 10 years of litigation before the Supreme Court, in June 1961, upheld the constitutionality of an order of the Subversive Activities Control Board, which had found that the party was a Communist-action group, dominated and controlled by the Soviet Union.

The Justice Department still is considering what new steps to take against the party, in the light of the Court of Appeals decision. It has been studying two principal alternatives — whether to reindict the party or to retry the old indictment.

The later would require the government to prove that a volunteer was available back in 1961, to register the party. That course of action would be enormously complicated and tenuous, at best, in the courts.

That's why, it was learned, government experts are nearly sold on the reindictment—and on this unusual plan:

—To seek out a volunteer, be he lawyer, newspaperman or

Russia Completing Transfer

Cuba To Operate Missile Facilities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is reported to be handing over the operation of its anti-aircraft missiles in Cuba to the Castro military forces—but with a warning against trigger-happy firing at U.S. reconnaissance planes.

The transfer of the missile operations from Russian to Cuban hands is—according to information obtained by the United States—going on as the Russians near completion of their troop withdrawal.

The information indicates 600 to 800 Soviet officers and men left Cuba last month and about 1,200 more are still to be withdrawn. The Soviets will leave behind, however, what is described as a permanent training mission of 800 to 1,000.

At the height of the "eyeball to eyeball" missile crisis in October 1962 the Russians were believed to have 22,000 or more troops in Cuba.

The 24-base network of surface-to-air missiles — SAMs—the Russians are turning over is believed still capable of shooting down the American high-altitude reconnaissance planes that are patrolling Cuba.

The information here is that the central command governing the SAM sites is still under control of Soviet officers. Also, officials have given support to published reports that the advanced Soviet radar installed in the missile system has been dismantled and withdrawn. This would reduce the effectiveness of the missiles and their ability to knock down the swift American jets.

In another development Friday, the Organization of American States voted 17 to 0 to call a meeting of hemisphere foreign ministers here July 21 to consider breaking all diplomatic and economic ties with the Castro government. Mexico abstained in the vote.

Under the Inter-American Treaty of Mutual Assistance, Venezuela has asked the OAS to adopt sanctions against Cuba—the severing of diplomatic ties, a halt in economic relations and suspension of sea and air communications.

Girl, 9, Is Hit By Car On Rt. 344

A nine-year-old Leetonia girl received severe injuries Friday at 3:05 p.m. when she darted onto state highway 344, three-tenths of a mile west of Leetonia, and was struck by a car driven by Dorothy Irene Miller, 21, of RD 1, Leetonia.

The victim, Karen Lynn Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lloyd Brooks of RD 1 Leetonia, was checking the mailbox at the side of the Leetonia - Franklin Square Rd. when the accident occurred.

She was admitted to Salem City Hospital at 3:45 p.m., suffering from a possible concussion and chest injuries and lacerations.

For Excitement: Skin-Diving

Neptune's Imps, County Group, Enjoy Sport

By GLENN SCHOTTEN

To Neptune's Imps, water is the happy medium. This small clan of Columbiana County skin and scuba divers earn their living terrestrially, but prefer their fun under water. At every opportunity they leave their desks or shop machines behind to explore the eerily quiet aquatic world, a world usually unknown by even the best of ordinary swimmers. The divers' equipment permits long stays underwater to probe and explore to their heart's content.

THOM WASHAM of Lisbon, one of the best frogmen in Ohio, is typical of these excellent swimmers who don black, waterproof suits of rubber-like material, aqualungs and other diving equipment to carry on their pastime. An ex-sailor and North Carolinian, Thom's been diving for 10 years.

"I don't know what the strange attraction is: say its something that gets into your blood," the 33-year-old enthusiast says.

Jim Berger of RD Salem, another skin diving fan, has had some harrowing as well as gratifying experiences in the art. He can laugh now at such hazards as running out of air 110 feet below the surface of a lake in Martinsburg, W. Va.

HOW DOES IT FEEL WITH the air in your aqualung, strapped on your back, spent? "It's like having somebody squeeze your soda straw shut while you're trying to sip, Jim described it. Fortunately, by steadily slowly exhaling until he bobbed to the surface, he was able to avoid suffocation. "It's no time to panic!", Jim warns.

Jim, Thom and other Imps searching the bottoms of deep bodies of water haul to the surface a curious collection of sunken paraphernalia. Some items such as false teeth or tackle dropped by fishermen, they are directly in search of. Other objects the divers only happen onto.

"We've never found any lost treasure so far, but we haven't stopped looking," Jim says, tongue-in-cheek.

THE MEN HAVE HAD some jolting encounters with under water life which, although surprising, has never proved dangerous. Once, Jim, while diving in the Atlantic Ocean off the Massachusetts coast came face to face with a huge aquatic creature.

"Underwater your vision is distorted," Jim says, "and all I knew at the moment, was that whatever this fellow was, he was big."

Apparently the animal was as surprised at Jim. Both shot up through the water almost simultaneously and six feet away as the diver surfaced, he saw what had brought on his shock — a large seal, staring at him curiously in the face. The divers have not encountered any sharks but are sure of one thing. If you had to do battle with a shark with the knife that divers hang at their lead-weight belt, you'd come out second best, they say.

Inevitably, the uninitiated believe the big dagger at a skin diver's waist is a shark fighter. Actually the dagger serves underwater divers for a purpose similar to the machete of the jungle fighter: to disengage oneself.

Divers will occasionally run smack into an entanglement of stout fishing line which could spell trouble without the weapon. Underwater vegetation also at times presents a problem the knife quickly dispatches.

A FAVORITE SPORT for divers who make it to New England, such as Jim and Vic Lake, is "bug-grabbing". For lobster lovers, it is a field day, like picking cherries from a bottom rung.

Once Berger plunged to the bottom and grabbed two decent-sized lobsters. As he captured the second, his eyes lit on the pride of the Bay State — a seven-pound specimen which Jim could envision reddening in a boiling pot.

Putting both the smaller lobsters in one hand, he oozed around to the giant's rear, finally clamping his hands over the crustacean's back, amid a lot of kicking and fuss.

A thrill of jubilation shot through Berger. But it soon dissipated when upon surfacing a local "salt" told him his prize was an "egger", a female ready to give birth to young. Berger let her slip back into the brine.

MOST CHILLING — SOUNDING of the scuba and skin diver's experiences is a plunge into ice water. "We've out through 13 inches of solid ice on New Year's Day to dive," Jim says. It's not as cold as it sounds since the suit keeps the diver warm for a good spell.

The Imps offer their services to law enforcement agencies such as the sheriff's department, highway patrol, the Red Cross and others needing rescue or exploratory missions underwater.

A big thrill for the divers is rummaging around among the many sunken fishing and cargo boats that populate the floor of Lake Erie and Canadian lakes. Berger recently helped haul up a hydroplane that crashed in a race over Conneaut Lake seven years earlier. Parts were salvaged but the water had rotted much of the flying machine.

Rattling a Saber In Saigon

Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor's assignment as U.S. ambassador to South Viet Nam further complicates efforts to assess this country's position in troubled Southeast Asia.

President Johnson's selection of the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to succeed Henry Cabot Lodge in a diplomatic role has been greeted with a mix-sher puzzlement.

The command shakeup has been interpreted by many as giving credence to mounting speculation that the U.S. is ready to adopt a hard-nosed attitude in Southeast Asia even to the point of risking war with Red China.

THIS interpretation has drawn applause from those who believe the U.S. has been made the butt of a ghastly international joke in being forced to continue a deteriorating and costly war of containment in South Viet Nam.

At the same time, it has evoked apprehension from those who believe Gen. Taylor's mission to Saigon is to carry the war into North Viet Nam, a move which almost certainly would bring the U.S. in to head-to-head involvement with the Red Chinese.

Others who take a less emotional and possibly a more correct view of the situation believe the assignment of a top military man to head our embassy is President Johnson's way or rattling a saber he is neither willing nor prepared to use.

THERE is every reason to believe the President regards South Viet Nam as the political Achilles heel that could jinx his plans for future occupancy of the White House. South Viet Nam is an issue in the presidential campaign and further deterioration of the U.S. position there with the threat of outright retreat or defeat could hurt Johnson seriously.

Gen. Taylor's presence in Saigon undoubtedly will strengthen the military command. But it seems doubtful the President would be willing, at this point, to go beyond the muscle-flexing stage in an effort to show the Viet Cong we are prepared to play for keeps.

No Time For Haste

Attorneys for James Nolan, the Cleveland who successfully challenged Ohio's Hanna amendment, are letting their zeal get in the way of good judgment by pressing for an immediate rejudging of the Ohio House of Representatives.

Although technically the Hanna amendment still is in the courts, no one now doubts Ohio will be forced to reapportion to follow the U.S. Supreme Court dictum of "one person, one vote."

We accept that, but we cannot accept the Nolan argument that the change should affect the legislature to be elected in the fall.

Why the undue haste?

OHIO has lived with the Hanna amendment for 61 years and we doubt that one more legislative session with at least one representative from each county will be unbearable.

And a solution to malapportionment in the House is not something that can be pulled out of the air and slapped into effect over night. If any problem deserves deliberate, cool-headed consideration it is reapportionment.

What type of apportionment formula should Ohio adopt? If only the Hanna amendment is declared unconstitutional, the state would revert to the plan in effect prior to 1903. And although that formula would provide for more equitable representation, it still would not square with the Supreme Court ruling.

A wholly new formula is needed and, in our opinion, should be accompanied by legislative subdistricting to carve populous counties into representative districts.

If the Nolan forces were to have their way, the legislature would have to rush into special session to devise the formula and put it into effect. Then special primary elections would be required prior to Nov. 3.

THAT MIGHT be humanly possible, but the cost to Ohioans, both in tax dollars and in the type of government this chaos might breed, makes the Nolan plea unworthy of consideration.

And certainly it was not the Supreme Court's intention that reapportionment be carried out at such break-neck speed. True, Chief Justice Warren did call for "prompt" action, but he qualified that by saying:

"... Under certain circumstances, such as where an impending election is imminent and a state's election machinery is already in progress, equitable consideration might justify a court in withholding the granting of immediate effective relief in a legislative apportionment case, even though the existing apportionment scheme was found invalid."

Since Ohio held its primaries in May, there is no question that the election machinery is in progress.

Many Ohioans, particularly those in the 48 counties which would lose their individual representatives, will find reapportionment bitter medicine to swallow. It can be made more palatable, we think, if the prescription is drawn after careful deliberation.

Recognition

Congratulations are in order for two Salemites elected to high posts this past week.

Carl Burcaw, whose father served with the Union forces in the Civil War, has been named commander of the Ohio Department, Sons of Union Veterans, and Mrs. Ford Joseph, Sr., long active in the Catholic Daughters of America, has been appointed district deputy.

This Is Art?

"Pop" art leaves me cold.

I make no pretense of being an art critic simply because I happen to be a Sunday painter. But the subject of "pop" art is one on which almost anyone should qualify to comment.

I have no argument with abstract art. In fact, most of the abstract paintings I have seen I have enjoyed, some to a greater degree, some to a lesser degree. I am not one who feels compelled to know exactly what the artist had in mind when he created a particular artwork. I am of the school that believes that beauty is in the eye of the beholder. If an object appeals to me, I enjoy it because of the sensation it creates in me.

ADMITTEDLY, art has undergone many changes since man first attempted to preserve an idea or an experience on stone, bark or clay. One of the endearing qualities of art is that it is always changing.

"Pop" art is merely the latest of a long line of schools and perhaps it will prove to be an enduring one. But it arouses some questions in my mind.

Is a painting of row upon row of soup cans stacked on a grocery shelf really artistic? If it is, then is a supermarket really a museum of modern art with galleries of canned soups, canned fruits, canned vegetables, boxed cereals, bottled soda pops, colorful housewares, and invinutim?

Does a rectangle of canvas or plywood painted pure white or pure black or pure blue become a work of art because of the interplay of shadows upon it? If so, then should every painted rectangular form be regarded as art and the painter an artist?

Is the enlargement of an illustration for a toothpaste advertisement an appropriate subject for a home's dining room mural? If so, are all the weekly and monthly publications that carry pictorial advertisements purveyors of art rather than information or entertainment?

SUCH OBJECTS as described are selling for big prices in large numbers, so one could hardly deny that "pop" art has found a friendly audience.

But for my part, when I learn of, for instance, a stuffed mountain goat with an automobile tire wrapped around its midsection being exhibited as art, I get the feeling that someone is putting me on.

I wonder if the artist isn't laughing at his audience rather than with it.

"Gee—Who's In Charge of This 'Youth-For-Johnson' Thing?"

"Wonder How the Seats Are in the Cow Palace."

Planned Inflation

By RAYMOND MOLEY

The ominous and continuing drain on the gold reserves of the United States has been obscured in the past few months by several diversions. One has been the struggle within the Republican party over the presidential nomination.

In leveling their heavy guns upon each other, Republicans have neglected one of the major issues against President Johnson in a campaign year. The continuous succession of optimistic speeches and statements by the President would have us believe that we are living in the best of all fiscal worlds.

The Treasury has also provided plenty of information which might be described as synthetic food for confidence.

THE PRESS, busy with reporting these diversions, generally neglected a most ominous suggestion of things to come in a report of the joint Economic Committee under date of March 19, 1964. The report was entitled, "The United States Balance of Payments." It said, in part:

"The 'free' gold reserve has declined by an average of nearly $1.4 billion per year since 1957, partly because of the growing domestic money supply and partly because of gold loss to foreigners. It is entirely possible that the 'free' gold supply will be eliminated even if the United States restores equilibrium to its balance of payments."

It should be noted that one of the reasons for this loss of "free" gold is that the increase of the money supply by deficits demands more gold for the reserve against the new currency.

Another and the more noteworthy cause of the loss is the withdrawal of gold by foreigners.

In either case, it is a measure of lax fiscal policies by the administration in Washington.

The report continues: "It is a sound policy to take preventive measures against a possible crisis of confidence if the Federal Reserve Board were forced to take emergency action."

Finally, the Joint Economic Committee recommends that "the U. S. gold stock should be freed immediately of its domestic reserves function and made available for international monetary purposes."

THIS ATTITUDE toward a financial crisis is in the same pattern as the administration's habit of dealing with Communist aggression. Instead of taking stronger action, it retreats (as in Laos) by yielding free territory through the device of neutralization. If you can't lick 'em, give 'em what they want.

The threat of a further loss of "free" gold should be met by a check upon inflationary spending and by cutting down the amount of foreign-give away money. But that would run against the administration's spending policies. Therefore, the Democratic majority of this committee would take away all the gold backing of the currency to provide gold for shipment abroad.

Rather than be forced off gold by present policies, we would abandon a gold reserve entirely.

This action would, it is claimed, prevent a loss of confidence later by losing confidence now.

A completely flat currency would be the result. It would be "greenbackism" with a vengeance. There would be unlimited bank credit expansion. And the net result would be uncontrollable inflation.

FIVE REPUBLICAN members of the Joint Economic Committee strongly dissented from this recommendation. They were Representatives Curtis, Widnall, and Kilburn and Senators Miller and Jordan. Sen. Javits, who so loudly protests that he alone is in the "mainstream" of Republicanism, agreed with the Democrats on the proposal.

Rep. Curtis should be commended for his vigorous defense of sound policy in this and other matters coming within the jurisdiction of this inflationary minded committee.

The administration made a great play of the fact that in April, the month after the report was issued, there was a small "increase" in our supply of "free" gold stock. This, however, was not a real gain for the United States. It was largely a bookkeeping matter. The administration accomplished this by drawing upon its reserves of foreign currency. It merely took half of its foreign currency reserves and bought gold. But this was a mere gesture to provide a good and reassuring item for political reasons in a political year.

We may be correct in assuming that this dangerous proposal of the Democratic members of the Joint Economic Committee (plus Sen. Javits) is a reflection of what the Johnson administration may propose once the election is out of the way.

Election In Mexico

By BERT QUINT

MEXICO CITY — Last November, when the board of directors of that super-efficient company known as the Institutional Revolutionary party (PRI), whose business is the running of this country, chose its candidate for president of Mexico, they found themselves with a problem on their hands.

Gen. Alfonso Corona del Rosal, executive secretary of the party that has been in power since the 1920s, put it this way:

"Our biggest difficulty in the electoral campaign will be to find somebody to run against our man."

It wasn't that "our man," Gustavo Diaz Ordaz, then secretary of interior affairs, was such an overwhelmingly popular figure. Few Mexicans knew him, and fewer knew what he thought about the issues of the day. What was and is overwhelming is the strength of his party, so much so that anybody running against the PRI candidates for the country's major elective offices does so just for the exercise. In 1958, for example, the PRI candidate, now President Adolfo Lopez Mateos, got 90.4 per cent of the vote.

BUT SOMEBODY was found to make the race — a 44-year-old lawyer named Jose Gonzalez Torres of the National Action party (PAN). And just as Diaz Ordaz has been campaigning furiously as though he thought he had a chance of losing, Gonzales Torres has been campaigning just as though he thought he had a chance of winning.

With the possible, but not likely, exception of the PAN candidate himself, nobody really thinks that come Election Day, July 5, Gonzalez Torres will even come close to Diaz Ordaz in the voting. But the fact that the PAN has fielded a candidate at all is significant.

First of all, it's good for Mexico because it keeps the dream of an eventual, effective multi-party system alive. There are other parties, too, but they are even smaller than the PAN which ranks as the major opposition party, and so have little more than propaganda or nuisance value.

Though Gonzalez Torres won't win the presidency, at least some of his party's people will win seats in the lower house of Congress and maybe even a couple of senatorial seats as well.

However, the major benefit to the country of Gonzales Torres' participation is that it gives expression to an important segment of the population.

THE PAN, a right-wing, church-backed, but not terribly reactionary party, does not by any means represent a majority viewpoint. But it does represent a sizable minority which includes important economic, professional, and middle-class interests.

The airing of its opinions healthy and helpful in a country that is neither a democracy nor a dictatorship, but that has elements of both and that is politically more mature than many of its neighbors which are dictatorships or claim to be democracies.

These opinions, as enunciated by Gonzalez Torres, include the following points:

1. The PAN would break relations with Cuba. (Mexico today is one of only four Latin countries that still maintain those relations.) It would resume relations with Spain which were broken in 1939 when Gen. Francisco Franco overthrew the Spanish Republican government and became dictator. Mexico still recognizes the Republican government - in exile.

2. The PAN agrees with the PRI that the rural problem is the country's most serious challenge. But it opposes the ejido system in which poor peasants are given land taken from big landowners and are permitted to work it on a communal basis and control but not sell it.

The government's feeling is that if the peasants were permitted to sell this land, they would because of economic necessity, and the land would end up in the hands of land-grabbers again. Gonzalez Torres wants the peasant to be given the land as private property so that he "is not a slave of the government."

3. Labor unions should be non-political. Today, they are for the most part political organizations, belonging to the PRI, supporting it, and getting advantages as a direct result of this affiliation.

4. Religious teaching should be permitted. Now, as stipulated by the Mexican Constitution, only the state is allowed to engage in education. This stipulation was intended to keep religion out of the schools, a reaction to the days when the church practically ruled the country.

The PAN argues that "of 27 million persons of an age and condition so as to be able to read and write, only 10 million are literate." All kinds of educators should be welcome, it says, and people should be able to choose the type of education they want for their children.

5. While the PAN agrees that the state should make the rules for business and industry, it feels that it should leave those fields to private enterprise. Under the PRI, the state has played an increasingly greater role, entering into more and more businesses. The government claims that this increased intervention is necessary because private initiative has failed to do the job.

The PAN's viewpoints are not those which will guide Mexico during the next six-year presidential period. But there have been indications that a growing number of Mexicans are accepting them.

Q—When did the British acquire the Rock of Gibraltar?

A—In 1704, during the War of the Spanish Succession, it was captured by a British force.

By LAURENCE BARRETT
Barry Morris Goldwater may or may not be out of the main stream of American thought, depending on your point of view, but one thing is certain: the junior Senator from Arizona is out of the main stream of American politicking.

A last trip to Texas recently confirms that the senator's style and mood have changed not at all since last September and October. In the intervening months his presidential prospects plunged to nearly zero and then soared again. He placed his neck on the guillotine of presidential primaries, felt the blade, and survived anyway. He saw new opposition spring from the ashes of old. Through this ordeal and education, Goldwater, the campaigner, remained the same.

What sets him apart from most other practicing politicians is his cool and casual approach to campaigning. He declines to court the affection of reporters; if he has nothing to say, he says nothing, and if his mood is bad he makes little effort to hide it.

HE SEEMS to dislike an elaborate campaign apparatus as much as big government. Sen. Goldwater still subjects himself to the vagaries of commercial airline schedules. He flew from Washington to Dallas with just one staff assistant.

Reporters who had been in touch with his headquarters all day still had no firm word on his schedule for later in the week. So they asked the senator — he took the question as perfectly natural — and found he was rather uncertain himself. But he explained thoughtfully the pros and cons of a suggested visit to Atlanta.

At an airport, in the absence of an organized reception or farewell, he assumes the anonymous demeanor of an ordinary traveler.

The other night, he sat in the corner of an airport lounge indulging his interest in flying by reading an aviation magazine. His sole companion thumbed reading an aviation magazine. Then they traded reading matter.

The lounge was already crowded, and when a woman entered Sen. Goldwater was the only man in the room to rise and offer her a seat, which she declined with a smile.

HIS GESTURE lacked any hint of ostentation or pose. A gentleman simply offers a lady a seat. This is what he was taught as a youngster. Watching this man who would be president, one gets the impression he has forgotten or rejected nothing he learned or believed as the teen-age son of a prosperous Arizona family 40 years ago.

Perhaps this element in Barry Goldwater's make-up explains much about this man who inspires fear in some and adulation in others. He has the ability to remind people of simple things that they, too, learned a long time ago.

Many citizens, after all, remember a time when wars were fought to be won on the battlefield, and when there was never any doubt about America's ability and willingness to achieve "total" victory.

And this is why Sen. Goldwater has confounded those who expected him to modify his views, at least publicly, during

Robin Hood and his merry mates would have turned Sherwood green with envy had they known that today the Columbiana County Archers Club would meet every Sunday to enjoy in leisure what the "good bandits" of long ago used in their everyday existence.

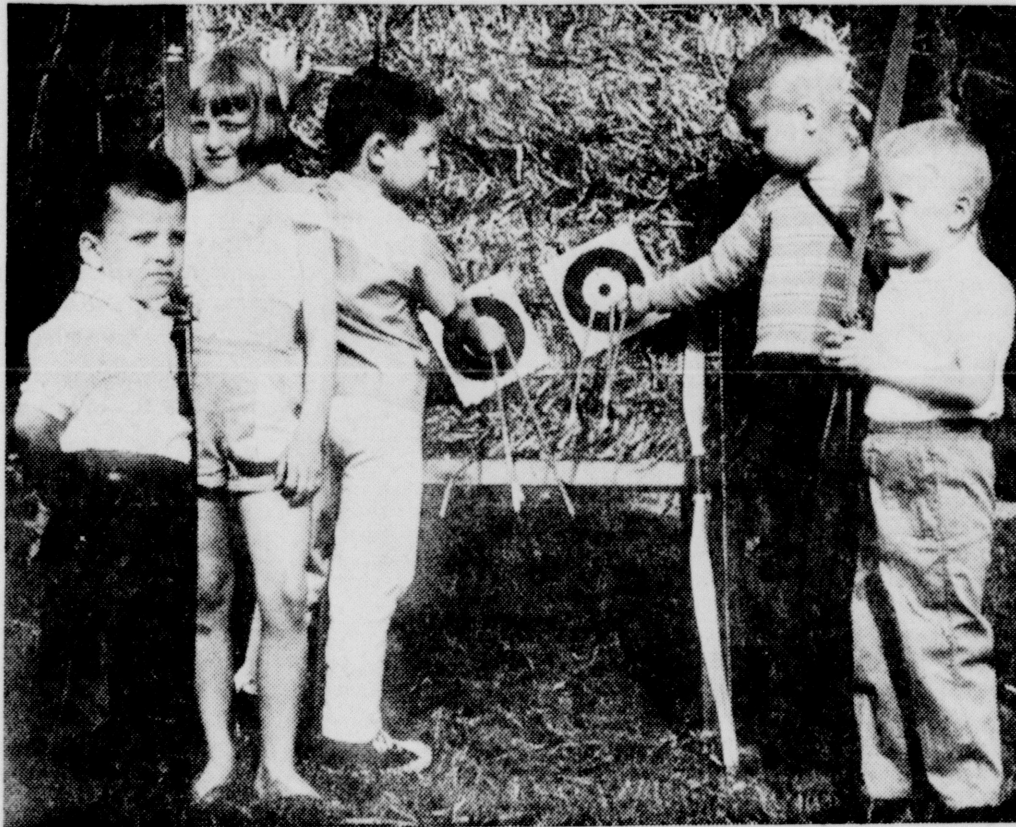

The club meets at different locations every week and has a "hunting range" on the Ted Enders farm on the Georgetown Road near Salem.

The "animals" in the woods at the Enders farm are actually pictures mounted on bales of straw. Circles on the animals indicate the scoring points on the 26 targets, which are set up on a one-mile course.

Club hunters travel the route in groups of four to six, with each hunter shooting three arrows at each target. Shooting distances average about 45 yards, with the bows having a pull of 30 to 50 pounds. No weakling could pull the bow.

Membership in the club is not limited to males as many women are also carried on the roll, which currently numbers about 25.

Organized in about 1957, the

Nancy Lockhart Wed To Charles D. Ring

Lockhart of North Benton, and Charles David Ring, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Ring of RD 1, North Benton, who were married Friday in the sanctuary of the East Goshen Friends Church.

Bernice Phillips was soloist and organ melodies were played by Ruth Alice Withers.

Escorted by her father to an altar adorned with vases of white gladioli and daisies with a background of fernery, the bride wore a full-length gown of white silk peau de soie embellished with appliques of Alencon lace. A bateau neckline and Camelot - length sleeves graced the molded bodice and the controlled skirt back swept to a brush train. Old-Fashioned Cherry Delight

Don't miss your chance. From about the first week in July to about the middle of August — when Bing cherries are in the markets — you can create something scandalously good.

Branded cherries. And they're so simple to prepare. Anoint the cherries, according to formula, with sugar and brandy, and let them mellow in a cool place for as long as you can bear, to keep from serving them with age.

It was the late Irma Rombauer, creator of the great "Joy of Cooking" who awakened modern cooks to the rewards of branding fruit. Her rule for "Tutti Frutti" has been widely begged, borrowed and stolen. When Mrs. Rombauer was a child, as eight or 10 varieties of fresh fruit came into season they were branded in a crock in her family's cellar, and she was "permitted to descend to this cool place on stirring expeditions."

Irma Rombauer never forgot "the excitement of the undertaking and the delicious aroma of the brew." The first 1931 edition of "The Joy" carried the Tutti Frutti recipe; so does Marion Rombauer Becker's marvelously complete 1963 revision of this most famous of cookbooks.

To start you off modestly on your Tutti Frutti career you might like to try brandying cherries and peaches — a simple two-fruit combination we favor. A year in which it is not "put-down" to serve on special occasions we count as a year lost!

BRANDED CHERRIES AND PEACHES

Fresh sweet cherries, sugar, 1 pint brandy, ripe peaches.

Wash, stem and pit cherries, reserving a few pits. Measure 1½ quarts stemmed pitted cherries into a crock, glass jar or enameled container with a close-fitting cover. Add the reserved cherry pits, an equal amount of sugar and the brandy. Stir, cover and store in a cool place; stir at intervals as necessary to dissolve sugar.

When you are ready to add fresh peaches, remove their skins and slice fairly thickly; add 1½ quarts to the cherry-brandy crock with an equal amount of sugar. Stir, cover and store in a cool place or in the refrigerator; stir at intervals as necessary to dissolve sugar.

When the fruit tastes sufficiently brandied to you, serve as a topping for vanilla ice cream. Keep any of the brandied fruit not used covered and stored in a cool place or the refrigerator for as long as you like.

How to Pit Cherries

To pit cherries you can use a lead pencil with an eraser top tucked into a metal band. Remove the eraser with a small sharp pointed knife; use the open metal band to push the pits out of the cherries.

BRIGHT COLOR AND EASY-CARE FABRICS are the highlights of the summer beach scene. Salty, sassy duck (left) makes the swiftest shift of the season. Zipped from stem to stern, there's contrast stitching to accent jumbo pockets. Easy cut duck jacket (center) in blue or white has front row of snaps and contrast stitching. It's teamed with slim duck pants. The sea parka (right) blossoms out for summer in a pastel floral print. It's worn over smooth surfers in active stretch denim for a truly new addition to the beach scene. These are Russ designs.

Easy-Care Colors Are Vacation-Bound

A colorful panorama will be seen on the waterfront this summer. And nature will have little to do with it except as background.

Bright red, stark white, bold navy and a myriad of rainbow pastels will dot the scene in duck beach shifts, stretch gabardine shorts of all lengths and sun and sailing parkas. And they all boast wash-wear, easy-care qualities.

Stretch denim surfers, branded with saddle stitching for a western flavor, will be teamed with checked or print stretch cotton shirts.

You can hit the deck in a gay water-repellent parka that will shield you from spray and wind.

They come in bright gingham checks, dashing madras plaids and polka dots—a great look over stretch pants. And if you're a sand lubber these parkas are handsome chill-chasers when it's breezy on the beach.

If you like the wind in your hair, skip the parka. Hop into a jaunty collarless snap-front duck jacket for beach or boating fun.

Whether you are a beachnik or a boatnik you can have a summer full of colorful play togs in a leisure wardrobe.

It's sun time and the livin' is active, but it's easy, too, because of the endless variety of leisure togs that require a minimum of care to ready them for play hours.

Doctors Probe Mystery of Growth

By KATHIE DIBELL

BALTIMORE, (AP) — Johns Hopkins Hospital began this month a $600,000 study on the mysterious process of human growth.

Financed by the National Institute of Health, the program is directed by Dr. Donald Cheek, associate professor of pediatrics and a former director of research at the Royal Children's Hospital in Melbourne, Australia.

"Knowledge on growth is fantastically little," Dr. Cheek says. "We don't even know what a child does with his calories." "No study of growth has ever been done before and someone has to do this to sustain study for the next 20 years," Dr. Cheek said.

Specialists from John Hopkins, Walter Reed Hospital and the University of Miami will be involved in the two-year project.

Study Dwarfs

The primary subjects for the study will be children with congenital heart defects and hypopituitary dwarfs.

These children were selected because they grow very rapidly after corrective surgery, or in the case of the hypopituitary dwarfs, after hormone treatments are begun.

Every two weeks, two abnormal children and a normal brother or sister will be intensively studied in the metabolic unit of the new Childrens Medical and Surgical Center. About 100 children will be used in the project.

There will be more than 90 different tests on the children to measure such things as biological age, mental growth, cardiac output, the amount of cell mass and the number and size of cells.

Dr. Robert Cooke, chief pediatrician at Johns Hopkins, and Dr. Cheek first discussed the possibility of a coordinated study of physiological growth while both were in Yale in 1951.

It has taken 18 months to set up the program at Johns Hopkins.

Never Before

"This is the only place in the world it could be done," Dr. Cheek asserts. "It is a very extensive program, involving a large group of investigators and assistants. It's never been attempted before."

Dr. Claude Migeon will be in charge of determining the biological age of the children. Dr. Eugene Lyon will measure dental age. Dr. William Myhan will make studies of amino acid metabolism from frozen tissues sent to him at the University of Miami School of Medicine. Drs. Richard Rowe, Helen Tausig and Catherine Neill will be in charge of the cardiology work. Dr. Allen Drash of the University of Virginia will assess mental growth.

"Once the study gets going it will run itself," Dr. Cheek says. "I'm just the maitre d'."

The Mature Parent

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE

Dear Mrs. Lawrence: I think I need professional help. Suddenly after nearly 14 years of marriage I don't want to go on living with my husband. I know that if he tells me one more time not to bother him with my worries I am going to ask him for a separation. The worries he doesn't want to be bothered with are our three children.

Last night when I asked him to look over some summer camp folders our older boy had collected, what I got was "Can't you ever leave me alone?" If he wants to be left alone, he should never have married. . .

ANSWER: I could not more heartily agree.

I think that your resentment of your husband's detachment is fine. What's more, I think that it is a resentment felt by increasing thousands of other American women who have been afraid to acknowledge it by a popularized, half-baked Freudianism which has equated all female protest with bad, feminine "aggressiveness."

And a pity it is. For our resentment of a husband's abdication from manhood is not only a passionate appeal for its restoration to him but an equally passionate demand for the restoration of our womanhood.

This is Dr. Karl Menninger speaking out on the problem of America's immature men in his book "Love Against Hate."

"The chief sin of men with reference to their wives and children is not harshness, not parsimony, not tyranny or injustice or eccentricity but passivity. It is felt by the woman as an aggression. The men do not feel inadequate or unmanly; they are too busy being very masculine, very manly in the meaning of those terms as they are understood in a society which prizes success in everything but mature sexuality."

What I'm trying to do, of course, is to encourage you to trust what you yourself know about your need by going and getting that professional help you speak of.

Breaking up a 14-year-old marriage isn't something to do suddenly on impulse, no matter how good the impulse feels. We break up marriages when we have given ourselves a chance to be fairly sure that it is all that can be done. But I have a feeling that this is not so in your case. You are a brave and honest woman, so I can't help feeling that the man who wanted you enough to marry you somewhere places considerable value on courage and honesty. Perhaps professional help will be able to teach you how to arouse that appreciation again.

Dear Father: What I have said is this: I'm opposed to dragging a boy to the altar and forcing him to marry the girl.

Unwilling grooms make rotten husbands and worse fathers. This boy is not unwilling, however. He wants to marry your daughter and I hope you will not try to stand in their way.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of The Salem News, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Computer Partners

By VIVIAN BROWN

The newest debreaker for young people may be a computer.

It got a workout recently at the University of Connecticut at Storrs, where a dance committee used it to match partners.

"Only it really didn't match them. It picked complementary characters, on the chance that opposites would attract, I guess," says Clare Mathews, 20, of Byram, Conn., a junior and member of the Student Board of Governors.

Three Chances

Each person was to have had a chance at liking one of three people, Clare explains. During the evening they would switch partners and then there would be a fourth period when they would go back to the partner they preferred.

"The only trouble is that some people didn't show. We had 550 students, about 100 less than we planned, and because we had more girls to begin with, we had matched some of them with two people instead of three," she says.

Things were a little confusing during the fourth period.

Some Went Home

"Some people didn't like any of their three dates, so they just went home," she says.

As far as Clare was concerned she met three attractive people who were interested in business, the category she said she wasn't interested in at all on the questionnaire.

"But what difference did it make for one evening? It was just a different fun idea for a party," she says.

Questionnaires that were filled out by the students asked whether they were interested in athletic events, philosophical issues, candid topics, travel, dates, and so on. They graded themselves from 0 to 5 as to whether they liked the category very much or not at all.

Serious Answers

Such questions as to whether you like people to ask YOU things or whether you prefer to ask them or whether you tend to join social groups or like to be alone received serious answers for the most part.

"But one boy in answer to 'How do you rate—as a big wheel or an average type?' said that he was a flat tire. I guess he has an inferiority complex. He must," says Clare who can't find any other reason for such an evaluation.

There were enough students who had fun at the dance to make the whole idea worth while, says Clare, who thinks the computer they borrowed from their engineering department will come in handy in the fall when freshmen arrive on the scene.

"It'll be a great way to get them to mix easily," she says.

If that quick-bread loaf doesn't slice well right after baking, wrap it tightly and store it overnight in a covered container.

'Ouch! My Feet'

American women say their feet hurt. This unromantic wall comes not from just a few, but two-thirds of the fair sex, according to the results of a recent nationwide survey of "shoe gripes."

The survey polled 1,500 women's editors, reporters and radio-TV commentators to discover how they and millions of women with whom they communicate really feel about their shoes. The overwhelming response was, in a word, "Ouch!"

Replies indicated that, regardless of geographical origin, two out of three women suffer varying degrees of discomfort from their shoes. Close on the heels of the No. 1 complaint was the dissatisfaction expressed by 40 per cent of those questioned with the durability of their shoes, and their children's.

Shoe designers will be pleased to note that the American female has little to say against style, except for the 24 per cent who said here was too much of it. "Footnotes" on questionnaires indicated that women don't dislike style, they just feel function is being sacrificed to fashion.

'Woman Status'

By RUTH MILLETT

Here's How Women Evaluate Women

By RUTH MILLETT

What gives a woman status in the eyes of other women?

A few weeks ago I asked my readers to help me find the answer to that question, raised by a correspondent who claimed that today women judge other women by such superficial standards as: How much money does her husband earn? Does she spend her time and money where it will make the biggest show?

"Is that really how women judge other women?" I asked the women of America, and they answered with deep seriousness. It is a question that American women, in these changing times, consider important.

AND SO THEY SAT DOWN and thought about it — thought about the women they admire most and why they admire them. And then they wrote me their conclusions.

Here from letters from small towns and big cities from every section of the United States, are the REAL standards by which women judge each other. "The woman I admire most," say American women:

1. Likes her husband and lets others know it.

2. Is a good mother, whose children are being trained in the ways that will make them happy and responsible and kind human beings.

3. Is a good friend — the kind who respects a confidence, can be counted on in time of trouble, and isn't jealous of other women or quick to criticize them.

4. Has the kind of quiet poise which comes from being at peace with herself and those around her.

5. Gives of her time to her community and to her church, without neglecting her family.

6. Contributes ideas, instead of gossip when she is in a group.

7. Takes pride in her appearance, without making it a full-time job.

8. Keeps alive her own individuality and pursues her interests instead of burdening her husband and children with the knowledge that they are her whole life.

THOSE ARE THE QUALITIES that women reffered to over and over as being the ones they most admire. And though not one woman claimed all of those qualities for herself, many said they knew women who had them all. One woman ended her letter with this promise to herself:

"You have done us all a favor. Now that you've made me sit down and see clearly what I admire in others, I'm going to tape my list in my kitchen cabinet and read it every day for inspiration."

When you buy white fabric gloves for summer, why not buy them the way you buy hosiery—several pairs of the same style. This way if you spot or lose one, you still have a mate for the other.

Car Insurance Rates In County To Be Lowered

The Ohio Department of Insurance has approved a decrease of 3.4 per cent in Columbiana County automobile insurance premium rates, it was announced today.

The premium adjustments, effective July 1, will not affect outstanding policies but will apply to policies when they are renewed.

The Mahoning County premium rate was increased 3.5 per cent, except for Youngstown and suburbs where it dropped 1.4 per cent.

The rate changes were made by the state's major insurance companies in accordance with losses incurred by the firms on behalf of their insured motorists in that territory.

In territories where losses declined, premiums are being reduced. Increases apply to areas where losses have increased.

Playgrounds Plan Scavenger Hunt

Playground children will knock on doors Monday to seek materials which they can use for handcraft work at the summer playlots.

Much of the material to be used in handcraft program will be scrap material. The purpose of utilizing such material goes beyond cost, explained Director Merlin Davidson. It is primarily to teach the children to make "something from nothing" by encouraging originality, ingenuity and creative instincts.

The children will solicit such things as cardboard boxes and cartons, cloth, felt hats, cord, yarn, jars, vases, clean tins, pipe cleaners, coat hangers, jewelry.

Although slightly improved today, Spec. 5 Donald Dale Whittington, 21, of Lisbon RD 3 remains on the "critical" list at a hospital in Ridgeway, S.C., with injuries received in the crash of an army transport plane on takeoff about midnight Wednesday.

A relative in East Liverpool was advised this morning that the serviceman suffered a serious head injury and sinks into a coma on occasion. He was to undergo X-rays today.

Aboard the plane as assistant flight manager, Whittington was one of 15 occupants injured. Five passengers were killed, along with two soldiers on the ground in the vicinity of the crash site.

He said he was pleased that the talks with Erlander were "held in a frank and friendly atmosphere" and reviewed some of the points of the joint Swedish-Soviet communique issued Friday night, including their mutual dedication to peace.

Khrushchev's visit ended with the Swedish government disappointed that he had failed to clear up the mystery of a long-missing Swedish diplomat, but intrigued at the prospect of increasing trade with the Soviet Union.

Erlander issued a statement proclaiming his "strong disappointment" that the Soviet government has not felt it could do more about the case of Raoul Wallenberg, the missing diplomat.

Wallenberg, credited with saving thousands of Jews in Hungary in latter stages of World War II, was arrested by the Red army in Budapest in January 1945.

The Russians said in 1957 that Wallenberg had died in Moscow's Ljubljanska Prison in July 1947. The Swedish government rejected the explanation.

early Wednesday and prepared to start for Salem. The moving van failed to show up at 8 a.m. scheduled. The movers had been at the home previously, packing all the family belongings into boxes. When 9 a.m. came and no movers had appeared, McDonnell learned that a mix-up had taken place. Transportation was not available.

Since plans were all worked out to move on Wednesday, including making motel reservations, and since everything they owned was packed away in the boxes, the McDonnells decided to try to find another van and luckily, through a friend, were able to get one that day.

WITH THAT DIFFICULTY over, the family started westward in two cars. No other major problems arose during the trip, although one humorous incident took place during a stop for a snack. When the parents decided to stop for a coffee break at 11:45 p.m. only the three older children were awake. They went into a restaurant with their father, who ordered coffee for him and his wife and milk and toast for the three children. Soon, another child awoke and went into the restaurant for the snack. One after another followed the pattern — each individually — until the confused waitress began to ask where they were all coming from. Finally, the 10 children were all happy with milk and toast.

The home on State St., once the residence of W. S. Arbaugh, is ideal for the lively, happy McDonnell brood. The youngsters are all interested in sports and get along well playing together. The three older ones are a great help to Mrs. McDonnell, because of the care they take of the younger children. They enjoy playing kickball, tennis, swimming and picnicking and being near the pool at Centennial Park.

Billy, 14, will be a ninth grade pupil at Salem Junior High School. The next six children, who all hope to enter St. Paul School, are: Kevin, 12, seventh grade; Karen, 11, seventh grade; John, 10, fourth grade; Tim, 8, third grade; Mary, 7, second grade; and Patrick, 5, first grade.

Mike, 4, will be a kindergarten pupil at McKinley School. Katherine, 3, and Michele, aged one, will be at home.

THE NEW A & P PLANT will bring additional families to Salem, but the McDonnell family is without a doubt the largest.

Do they like Salem? They're in love with the community already.

Rev. John S. Redmond, pastor of Concord Church, hopes to have the ground excavated by the end of next week and the building weather-tight by November or December.

The congregation still worships in the original structure, erected in 1859, although a basement has been built under it and the sanctuary was completely renovated two years ago.

On the schedule are visits to North Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Illinois, Utah, Washington, Oregon and North and South Dakota.

Scranton's people indicated much of the strategy discussion with Rockefeller would be geared to the following week when platform hearings begin in San Francisco.

In addition to Rockefeller, the strategy session included Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa. A planned visit by Colorado Gov. John Love was canceled because of a pressing problem with legislative redistricting in Love's state.

Scranton returned to Harrisburg late Friday night, capping another hectic flying trip in quest of delegates that took him to Delaware, New Jersey, West Virginia, Florida, Ohio and Michigan in four days.

In each state he expressed optimism, despite small turnouts of delegates in Florida and Ohio—two states with 92 delegate votes between them.

Scranton spent Friday in Michigan where, with the backing of Gov. George Romney, he got a warm reception. Michigan delegates are committed to Romney on the first ballot, but are uncommitted after that.

the penitentiary's School of Adult Education 101 is accredited to the eighth-grade level by the State Board of Education. The youngest graduate was 19, the oldest 50.

"This should prove that disadvantaged men in prison do have the desire and ability to acquire and retain knowledge," said valedictorian Jonathan Sellers, who is serving a 15-year term for armed robbery.

In two school terms at the penitentiary, Sellers, 33, moved from the fifth-grade level to high school valedictorian. He is expected to become a "teacher" at the penitentiary next year.

Three certified public school teachers act as supervisors, assisted by inmates and volunteers—including the mayor who sometimes teaches speech class.

With self-teaching methods used, the inmate teachers are available to give examinations and assist the students when needed. Classes are held in a special building from 6 to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday, and on Saturday mornings. A minimum of 12 hours of instruction a week is required.

The program, begun in 1951 under the direction of Warden Vernon L. Peppersack, attracted 768 students this year. Peppersack, now state commissioner of correction, was the main speaker Friday.

The cost: $30 a year per student for books and supplies.

Thousands of Fish Killed by Gasoline

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio (AP)—A massive kill of fish in the Ohio River in this area was attributed today to contamination of the water caused by a break in a gasoline line.

Donald T. Duke, city water superintendent, said several hundred gallons of gasoline were dumped into the river Wednesday when the line broke at McKees Rocks, Pa., near Pittsburgh and the contaminated water was just now reaching this area.

Fishermen on both sides of the river reported thousands of dead fish were floating Friday. Most of the fish were four to seven inches long and included bass, carp and shad, the fishermen reported.

Boaters Can Stop For Hamburgers

Floating Diner Is Latest At Berlin

By GLENN SCHOTTEN

What is probably Ohio's only floating restaurant is open for business off the shores of Berlin Reservoir, northwest of Salem.

Brightly decorated in white, red and blue, the Blue Boy Boat-In is dispensing short-order meals to the myriads of boaters who populate this resort area at Paul Reed's Marine landing off the Benton Rd.

Currently, it lazily bobs in the shallow, shore waters serving customers at boatside or in the interior of the floating eatery. "Next summer we hope to anchor it out in the water for easier access of boaters," says Kenneth Dailey, who is the "father" of the water-borne restaurant.

BOAT-IN IS THE DREAM and investment of Dailey and 11 other Salem men, although it was the culmination of an idea of Dailey's dating from 1959.

Although there are other floating restaurants, such as in Florida, this is believed to be the first to serve a dual purpose, both for boaters in a hurry and those with leisure to be seated.

Looking like a water-borne trailer with covered patios extending from either side, the restaurant can accommodate at least 24 at six booths inside and as many more on the decks outside.

Just opened this week, the floater has been doing its biggest business in the late night hours or early morning hours.

"A hamburger looks a lot more romantic out on a lake in the moonlight," Dailey explains it.

The eatery is made mainly of aluminum alloy and is supported by four fiberglass pontoons that extend the length of the boat. The inner eating area is only 9 by 24 feet but outside the dimensions are 25 by 32 feet, including the decks.

Daily had specific ideas about the boat before he submitted it to the well-known industrial designer, Brook Stevens of Milwaukee. After all the snags were worked out, a Milwaukee company actually built the boat restaurant.

Two motors eventually will power the restaurant so it can be propelled to any spot in the lake.

Most customers do not object to the bobbing motion of the restaurant caused when passing boats leave strong wakes. "They're use to this sort of motion anyway so a little more doesn't matter," said Dailey.

The floater will also cater to parties. It has already signed up a group of undertakers hoping to have a ball on the eatery. It could be a real swingin' time on the bobbin' beanery.

Country Club Members Enjoy Improved Facilities

New Wall Divides Swimming and Boating Areas At the Country Club

Completion of a $16,000 capital improvements program at the Salem Country club this past spring has resulted in unprecedented activities at the club grounds and lake now that hot summer weather has set in.

THE CLUB'S BOARD OF trustees and President Wells Vaughters last year engaged engineers to draw up plans for a separate, treated swimming area. The purpose was to create an enlarged chlorinated area for swimming, apart from the section of the lake used for boating and fishing. This work was done last fall and winter.

Installed this spring was a unique trapeze which allows the swimmer to swing out from the shore and jump or dive into the water. This device, along with an improved diving platform and water slide for the younger children, has made the swimming more enjoyable. The enlarged beach area has clean, white sand, and for the first time the swimming water is free from plant and fish life.

Fish are plentiful, however, in the other part of the lake. It was restocked this spring.

AS A RESULT OF these improvements, plus the other facilities of the Club which include lighted shuffleboard courts, three well-kept tennis courts, playground equipment for smaller children horseshoe and courts, picnic areas plus the natural beauty of the surroundings — there is now a waiting list for Junior Memberships, and the adult memberships are almost at capacity.

New Trapeze Is Popular With the Younger Set

Portage Imposes Pet Quarantine

RAVENNA — The Portage County Board of Health has imposed a 90-day countywide quarantine and compulsory inoculation of cats and dogs in an attempt to control a recent outbreak of rabies in wildlife.

Five confirmed cases reported in Franklin Township led to the action Friday. Pets must be confined to an owner's premises, or under the owner's control if off the premises, said Dr. J. S. missioner. Violation of the S. Wisely, County Health Com-board's order carries a penalty of a $100 fine or 90 days in jail.

The Doctor Says

By Dr. WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT

Amebiasis Once Tropical Disease

Amebiasis, once thought to be limited to the tropics, is now found in every part of the United States. Its prevalence is increasing as travelers return from high incidence areas.

Dr. Brandstadt

This disease used to be called amoebic dysentery, but it would rarely be discovered if we doctors waited for diarrhea to develop in those who are infected.

The disease is caused by a microscopic parasite that may contaminate drinking water. Vegetables may be contaminated by being washed in such water and other foods may be contaminated by flies or by human carriers. This is why it is important to boil the water and avoid uncooked vegetables in areas where the sanitation is poor.

OF THE ESTIMATED 10 percent of the population who are infected, most have no symptoms and are classed as carriers. The symptoms, when present, are variable and may include fatigue, headache, loss of appetite, and vague abdominal discomfort.

Even in person who harbors germs these symptoms are often unrelated to his infection. For this reason your doctor cannot make the diagnosis of amebiasis on the basis of symptoms alone but must rely on a blood test and a microscopic stool examination.

Unfortunately the blood test is not as accurate as we would like and the stool examination is time-consuming and requires skill for reliable results. To further complicate the matter, there are strains of harmless amebas that are almost indistinguishable from those that cause the disease.

THE REAL MISCHIEF develops when amebas burrow into the walls of the intestinal tract and cause small ulcers. This results in bleeding which in the early stages is not recognizable without a blood test.

As a more serious complication, the amebas may invade the liver where they cause the formation of a chronic abscess that is very hard to treat. Although most persons with amoebic infections live in relative harmony with their parasites, amebiasis is a potential killer.

When a definite diagnosis of amebiasis is made, all other members of the family should be examined because they too are probably infected. There are several powerful drugs that can be used to rid the body of these unwanted free loaders. These include emetine, quinine and chloroquine.

The moral of my story is that, because of the difficulties in diagnosing this disease, the best treatment is prevention. Your first protection is a safe community water supply.

Screen your windows and swat every fly that comes inside. When traveling, drink boiled or bottled water or carry tablets of Globaline which can be used to purify a quart of water.

Palmer Leads Cleveland Open With Sizzling 131

23-Year-Old Shoots 132

Nicklaus Is Third, Comes In With 133

By FRITZ HOWELL
CLEVELAND (AP) — Two traffic jams were on today as the $100,000 Cleveland Open Golf Tournament went into its third round.

One was on the Highland Park Municipal Course, which is reeling from sub-par onslaughts led by Arnold Palmer. A flock of money-seeking talent is tangled near the top for the $20,000 stretch drive payoff.

The other is on the Ohio and Pennsylvania Turnpikes, which are filled with 54 hopefuls who failed to make the 144-stroke halfway cutoff. They are headed for Philadelphia, scene of next week's $120,000 White Marsh Tourney. They plan to sneak in a few practice rounds there, hoping to do better than they did here. That is a weekly problem to many of them.

The tournament trail is not a golden one for many of the newcomers. The 54 forfeited their $100 entry fee and most of them — unless they won a PGA tournament — must play a qualifier to get into the White Marsh field with the privilege of paying a $120 entry fee.

Another group as the field here is cut to 60 after today's round faces the same problem.

On top of such troubles, the pro contingent must prove financial responsibility for at least $250 a week to get PGA approval to play, and each must carry $300,000 liability insurance in case he conks a galleryite with a ball.

Palmer had no trouble with cutoff problems. He carved out an 8-birdie 64 Friday, his best round of the year for a 36-hole total of 131. This is the best halfway mark for anyone so far this season.

But he couldn't shake off a newcomer, 23-year-old Richard H. Sikes Jr. of Springdale, Ark., the 1961 and 1962 public links king and the 1963 collegiate champ. Sikes, appearing in his first PGA tournament — he turned pro just after the masters — also had an 8-birdie 64 and was only a stroke back at 132.

Third after a 65 which included a wedge-shot eagle was top money-winner Jack Nicklaus with 133. Al Geiberger and George Bayer were at 134, with Tony Lema, Rex Baxter and Terry Dill deadlocked at 135. Sub-par scores were boasted by 57 of the survivors, and 12 others hit it on the nose for the first two rounds.

National Open Champion Ken Venturi failed to survive the cutoff point. He missed by one stroke, with a score of 75-70-145.

Pirates Beat Cincy; Mets Romp 8-4

Dalrymple Gets Tip From McLish, Then Socks Homer In Phils Win

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer
You just know things are going right for the Philadelphia Phillies these days. They've got a pitcher who can't pitch helping a hitter who couldn't hit. That's the kind of weird combination which weaves winners.

When Clay Dalrymple's second homer of the season soared out of Busch Stadium Friday night for a 6-5 Phillie victory over the Cardinals, nobody could have been prouder than Cal McLish, the hurler who's spent the season on the disabled list.

McLish, whose sore arm has left him virtually useless to the Phillies' pennant push this season, took Dalrymple, whose bat has been something of a hindrance too, in hand recently.

"I've been watching you," McLish told Dalrymple. "You're not swinging the way you did last year."

The catcher listened, and so would you if your batting average was under .200. "He told me a couple of things I didn't realize I was doing," said Dalrymple.

"I was dipping my shoulder and lunging before the pitch got there," he said. "Now I'm concentrating on holding the bat still and driving down on the ball."

Cardinal reliever Ron Taylor can testify that Dalrymple drove the ball, but it went anywhere but down. Taylor came on to protect a one-run St. Louis edge gained when the Cardinals knocked out Jim (Perfect Game) Bunning in a three-run eighth inning.

After Tony Gonzalez doubled to open the inning, Dalrymple hammered one onto the right-center pavilion roof. Goodbye lead, goodbye ball game.

Cookie Rojas and Richie Allen also clouted two-run homers for the Phillies and Bob Skinner, whose eighth-inning double ignited the Cardinal rally, had four hits for St. Louis.

In other NL action, San Francisco nipped Los Angeles 4-3. Pittsburgh whipped Cincinnati 8-3. New York topped Milwaukee 8-4 and Chicago edged Houston 7-6 in 10 innings.

Bunning's perfect game magic disappeared fast when leadoff batter Curt Flood cracked a double in the first inning.

"I just heaved a big sigh when he hit that ball," said Bunning. "I said to myself, 'Well, things can get back to normal now.'"

The victory maintained Philadelphia's one-game lead over the Giants who parlayed eighth-inning errors by Maury Wills and Jim Gilliam into an unearned run and their second straight victory over the Dodgers.

Tom Haller's sacrifice fly drove in the run off Los Angeles' reliever Bob Miller in the first run off Miller in 31-2-3 innings.

The Pirates pounded three Red pitchers for 13 hits with Bill Virdon and Roberto Clemente contributing three apiece. Virdon had a triple and a two-run double and Clemente ripped a pair of doubles.

Starter Joey Jay, who gave up nine of the hits, was the loser.

The Mets exploded for an eighth-inning second with homers by Charlie Smith and Joe Christopher, the latter a grand slam, doing the major damage, and routing Warren Spahn.

Tracy Stallard survived three Milwaukee homers and went the distance to pick up the victory.

Pinch hitter Leo Burke's 10th-inning single bailed the Cubs out in their seasaw game with the Colts. The lead changed hands four times in the last two innings before Burke's hit brought Doug Clemens home with the winner.

CIO 3372 Garners 1st Win of Season

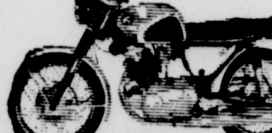

CIO 3372 turned in its best performance of the season as it trounced Famous Market 11-2 in Class E junior baseball competition at Cenniall Park Friday.

It was the first victory of the season for CIO 3372 who had lost six straight. Famous Market is now 1-4.

Bob Chamberlain, and Greg Everett paced the winners with two hits apiece.

The winners picked the contest in the fifth picking up five runs on a walk, error, singles by Chamberlain, John Crawford, Everett, and a double by Tom Vacar.

Chuck Cushman and Don Wolfgang led Famous Market with two hits apiece.

Angels Sweep 2 From Athletics; Tigers Nip Yanks; Chisox Lose

By MURRY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer
The Los Angeles Angels are having so much fun, you'd think they already were playing in Disneyland.

Their fun, however, isn't costing them anything. It's strictly at the expense of the rest of the American League.

The Angels extended their winning streak to 11 games Friday night, shutting out Kansas City 1-0 and 6-0 and moving into sixth place, just one-half game behind Cleveland and two back of fourth-place Minnesota.

McArthur Cops Women Amateur Golf

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio (AP)—A 31-year-old mother of three, who has been golfing more than half her years, is Ohio's new women's amateur champion.

Mrs. Barbara McArthur of Wooster spiced Friday's victory with the first hole-in-one of her life and the first ever shot in the finals of the annual Ohio Women's Amateur Tournament.

"The hole-in-one was tremendous, but it wouldn't have been anything without winning the tournament," the red-haired champion said.

To take the trophy, Mrs. McArthur defeated Ruth Pickrel of Dayton, 1 up, in the 36-hole championship match at the Belmont Hills Country Club.

The ace came on the 155-yard 14th hole. Her four-iron shot hit the pin and landed in the cup.

The freckle-faced wife of the Wooster Country Club pro Wallace McArthur led by two after the morning's 18 holes with a 78. She fell behind when she bogied the 13th hole, but the ace made it even and she finished the round with an 80, compared to Mrs. Pickrel's 79.

"I never won a title of this caliber before," she explained. She had to beat Sunny Moss of Cleveland, the tournament medalist, and Midwestern Intercollegiate Champion Maggie Martin of St. Clairsville to get to the finals.

The streak is the longest in the league in 2½ seasons and the longest in the majors in slightly more than two seasons. The New York Yankees won 13 consecutive games in September 1961, while the Los Angeles Dodgers picked up 13 in a row in May and June of 1962.

The Angels could tie those strings by beating the Athletics tonight and Sunday.

All of this comes at a time when the Angels reportedly are considering a short move south from Los Angeles to nearby Anaheim, site of Disneyland.

The shutouts Friday night gave Los Angeles three in the last five contests. Curiously enough, neither starting pitcher was around at the finish. Still, veteran Bo Belinsky earned his third victory in the streak while rookie Bob Meyer recorded his first major league triumph.

Meyer was replaced by Bob Lee in the seventh inning of the second game after Belinsky needed help from Bob Dilliba in the ninth inning of the opener.

Elsewhere in the AL, Minnesota blanked Chicago 2-0 before losing 9-4. Baltimore whipped Washington 9-4 in 13 innings. Detroit nipped New York 1-0 in 11 and Boston edged Cleveland 3-2.

Belinsky, who now has four straight victories and a 6-3 record, scattered six singles and didn't allow a runner past second base until Ed Charles singled and Rocky Colavito walked in the ninth. Dilliba came on and retired the Athletics without further trouble.

Meyer gave up five hits in the nightcap before leaving for a pinch hitter in the sixth. Lee held Kansas City hitless the rest of the way. Willie Smith, the pitcher turned outfielder, drove in two runs with a single and a bases-loaded walk for the Angels.

Twins' rookie Gerry Arrigo had a no-hitter for eight innings, but Mike Hersherberger led off the ninth with a line single to right field. Arrigo, 23-year-old left-hander had allowed only four base runners—two hit batsmen, an error and a walk—until then. Harmon Killebrew gave Arrigo all the support he needed with a two-run homer in the sixth.

Killebrew slammed his 25th homer in the second game, but the White Sox outslugged the Twins. Pete Ward clouted a three-run homer in the third while J. C. Martin connected with one on in the fourth. Jim Landis batted in three runs with two singles for Chicago.

Baltimore erupted for five runs with two out in the 13th inning, the first two on Boog Powell's 17th homer. Powell also singled in the tying run in the ninth and drove in another in the three-run second. Bill Skowro knocked in three runs for the Senators, two on a sixth-inning homer.

Detroit nipped the Yankees on pinch hitter Billy Bruton's run-scoring single with two out in the 11th. Gates Brown opened the inning with a pinch single, moved to second on an infield out and came home on Bruton's clutch hit. Dave Wickersham, who pitched the first 10 innings, won his 10th game against five defeats.

The Indians held a 2-1 lead when the Red Sox struck in the ninth. Felix Mantilla singled with one out and after another out, scored on Russ Nixon's pinch-hit homer off starter Tommy John. It was Nixon's first homer of the year.

By ALAN GILL
The Happy EDUCATOIS — I.

CHICAGO, ILL. "I'm here because I shot my face off at the University of Louisville in 1949 and '50."

The soft-spoken gentleman who had done the shooting-off was one of educational TV's great innovators. Dr. John W. Taylor, the "here" was Chicago's educational station, WT-TV, of which he is the executive director and which is possibly the healthiest ETV channel in the country, both financially and in terms of practical community service.

What happened in Louisville in '49? "Well," said Dr. Taylor, "NBC had a Sunday morning radio show that dramatized books and plays. In our English department, we had the idea of making a deal with NBC; we'd select the novels and plays for a 'University Theater of the Air' and then set up classroom discussions of the works, which would be recorded by the local station, WAVE for broadcasting late at night. We offered the twice-a-week WAVE discussions and the Sunday dramatizations as a kind of correspondence course for the community, with college credits offered.

"I worked. Early in 1950, we went onto TV as well and we got other universities and colleges interested — seven of them. That marked the first time college courses for credit were offered on TV. I wrote speeches and a magazine article, spreading the word. Then, for three years, I was deputy director of UNESCO. When that was over, an educator friend told me that if I wanted a job, Chicago was planning to build a TV station and was looking for a manager, educator and academic v.p. I came up here and they called my bluff."

A good thing, too. In its eight years of operation, WTTW has maintained a cozy solvency — Dr. Taylor can sing the birds down out of the trees — while other ETV channels have been living hand to mouth. Its general cultural programming, led by a couple of music-drama-satire-dance series called "Festival" and "Mosaic," is quite successful. But WTTW and Dr. Taylor have carried off the one "impossible" project, based on the Louisville idea of years ago, that is the envy of ETA people everywhere, "TV College."

"TV COLLEGE" enables Chicago viewers, both on the campus and at home, to accumulate the first two years of college credits on TV alone, if they wish. Each trimester, about 3,000 viewers take credit courses; another 3,000 to 5,000 do the work required but without credit; and WTTW figures that 200,000 to 250,000 eavesdroppers are on the premises through each of the courses.

This spring, for example, Chicagoans looking in on Channel 11 could have bettered themselves via the Fundamentals of Music course, Fundamentals of Mathematics, Overview of Human Relations Problems, Shakespeare, History of the American People from 1865, and Humanities 202.

The Chicago "TV College" project is more ambitious than any other in the country. A University of Detroit effort "has come close" but was "licked" — to use Dr. Taylor's word — by the fact that it was on ultra-high frequency. Penn State's courses are unlike WTTW's, on closed circuit and therefore restrictive.

BECAUSE OF THE success of "TV College" and the community's increasing needs for WTTW will be expanding its courses — for — credits operation in a few months with a new UHF station of its own, Channel 20. This offspring, which will be largely financed with a $299,619 award from the U. S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare, will concentrate on both in-classroom and at-home courses, as well as offering post-graduate courses and special instruction for policemen and firemen.

It will also release Channel 11 from some of its present chalk-talk commitments and let it broaden its cultural stuff. WTTW's director of programming, Chalmers H. (Chuck) Marous, rubs his hands briskly together these days, when you ask him about the new channel. He says, "I can hardly wait."

A word from THERON at the Country Store

I understand the new overpass is now open. I have been looking forward to making my first trip over it.

While on my trip through the western states I noticed so much building everywhere. Ohio better get moving or they will be way behind on their highway system.

In our almost 9,000 miles of travel we never found a mile of toll road after we left the Chicago area.

Finding The Way

Faith No Stage Setting

Anatole France is reported to have changed the scenery of his home to provide the mood for the book that he was writing. For "Thais" he surrounded himself with the art of Greece. When Joan of Arc was the subject, he hung on his walls some beautiful tapestries from 15th century France.

There is also the famous story of the czar who had scenery contrived along the river in order to hide the realities of the countryside.

OUR PROBLEM TODAY is the danger that "God" will become a scenery-shift, a name to be used to cover up our illiteracy. We ought to keep the pledges, not because it is nice scenery but because it is a faith of our people.

We ought to be concerned about the secularization of our society not because it is a pious gesture, but because it is an expression of a way of life.

Lewis Mumford once described the ancient Hellenistic world, writing, "The breakup of civilization is often accompanied by a deceptive amount of social activity. As in a bodily fever, the pulse becomes more rapid, the rate of oxidation faster, even the flush on the patient's cheek may give the deceptive appearance of health: only the glassy eye will indicate that the patient is unconscious of what is going on about him: his mind instead is grappling with phantoms."

THE BUSYNESS OF our scenery-changing may be interesting, but it is as futile as this phantom-grappling. Religion isn't a gesture. It isn't contriving a kind of atmosphere for life. It is a commitment to a way of life. It has to do with the whole of existence. It isn't a badge one wears; it's a faith one shares.

In the days of the Old Testament prophets, men were willing to allow them to be "religious," so long as they were scenery and not life-changing forces.

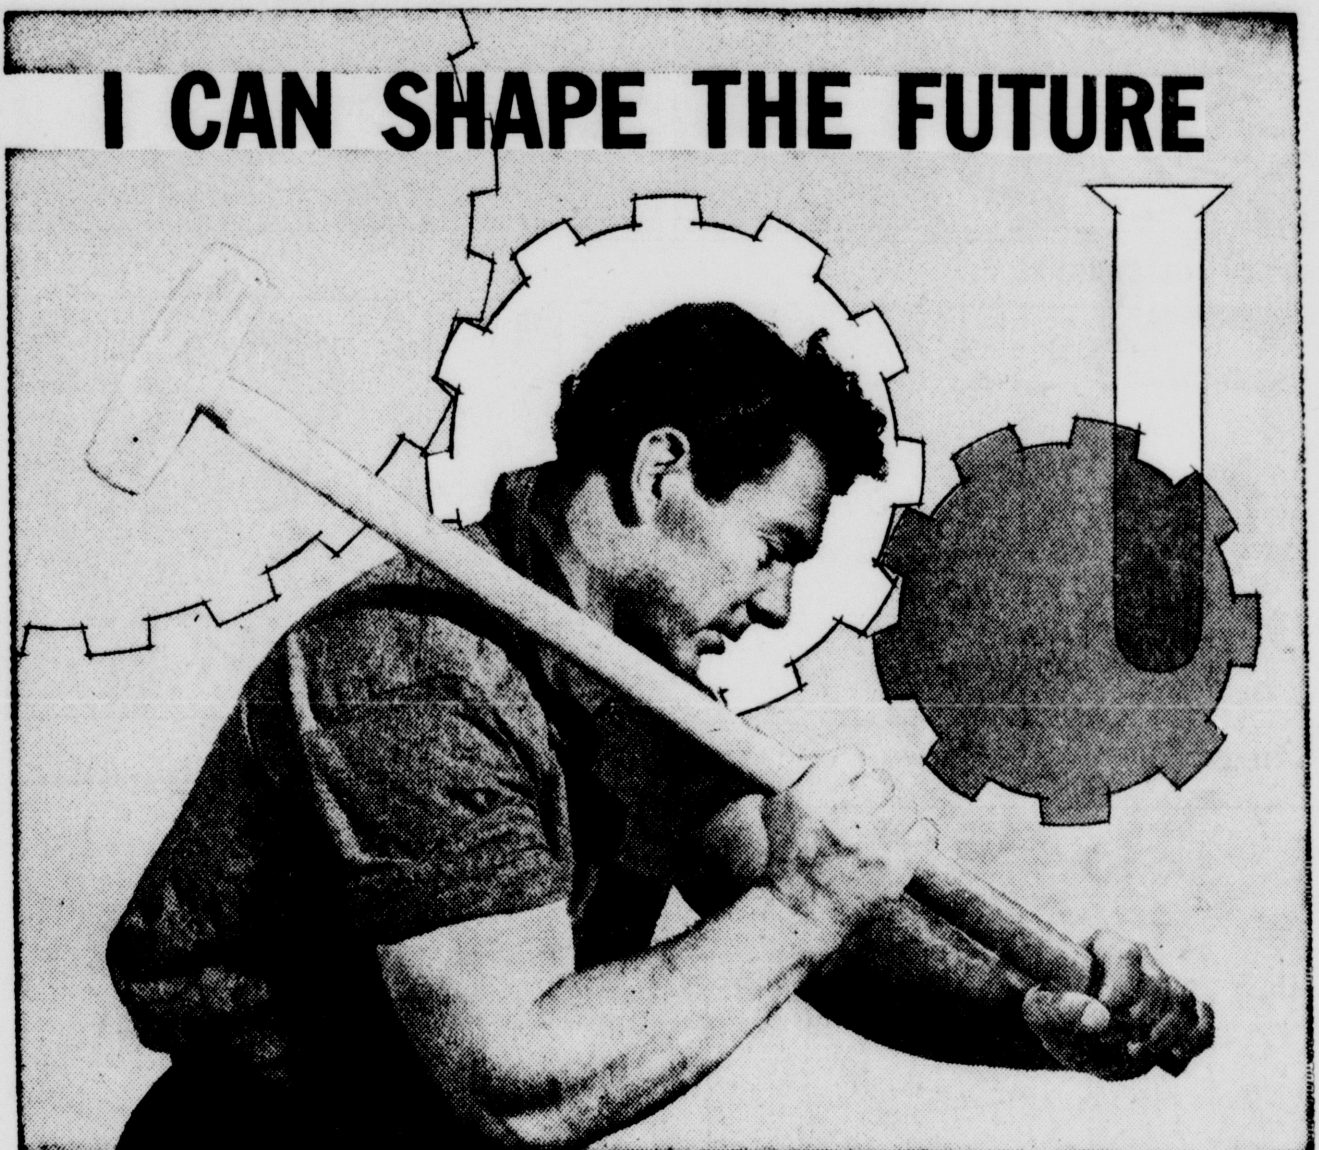

If John the Baptist had stayed in the wilderness, he would have been regarded as an interesting phenomenon, but certainly not a person to be op- posed.

If Jesus had spoken to a few followers without disturbing the complacencies about him, he wouldn't have confronted Gol- gatha.

This is always the history of faith. If it's scenery, there's no opposition. If it's life-chang- ing, there's a challenge. But there's also a new and impor- tant vitality.

I CAN SHAPE THE FUTURE

When I watch the stone mason at his trade . . . then I'm sure I can shape a stone. If . . . I had the right tools! If . . . I could apply just the right driving force!

But my stone always splinters, shatters.

It should be easier to shape the future. Tomorrow seems so formless, so pliable.

Yet there are so many tools. Which to use? So many kinds of force, of power. Which will shape, not de- stroy, my hopes?

I am realizing fast that the vital tools must be spiritual. My Church is training me to understand, to use them.

And centuries of Christian heritage convince me that the driving force ought to be spiritual. A Power that flows from God . . . is grasped by faith . . . and in the reverent hands of dedicated men will shape—rather than shatter—tomorrow.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL • ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a store- house of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regu- larly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regu- larly and read your Bible daily.
